THE FIELD A BEDLAM.

The grandstands could hardly hold the ecstatic Pennsylvanians then, and for five mimutes the whole field was bediam. The Tigers were furious, and came up to the kick-off with set teeth and glow-ering eyes. Lea kicked off by a long punt, but Brooke returned it to the very spot where it started from. The Princeton backs tried plunging into the centre, but they hit their heads against a wall and were downed three times without gain. A fake formation for a kick fooled the Quakers, and Barnett was sent around Geibert for five yards. Geibert got quick revenge, though, by tackling Ward behind the line when he tried to do the same with Rosengarten's end. Ward was hurt by a savage fall he got in this tackle and had to retire. Rosengarten came out and took Morse's place at right half. Barnett then shoving over towards place at left. Rosengarten is a brother of the Quaker end, and most of his plays were skirting his brother's end.

Wheeler managed to get his only gain of the game at this place, through Woodruff. He advanced the ball five yards. It was soon lout on downs, though, and of the game at this place, through Woodruff. He advanced the ball five yards. It was soon lost on downs, though, and

The Quaker backs made steady gains till they had brought the ball to Princeton's thirty-yard line. Here Brooke tried a goal from the field, but m'ssed.

Rosengarien succeeded in making the second long gain of the game for Princeton by skirting his brother's end Princeton by skirting his brother's end or fifteen yards, and Barnett followed with fifteen yards more, around Gelbert. Polo-grounds, and rolled up a score of 50 to 6 against the Bethlehemites, and they could have readily increased this by 20 points had they been so inclined.

A surprisingly small number of persons visited the grounds—less than a thousand.

The Yale team made a particularly good impression. They are as bulky in the line as a big college team should be, but their weight is not their strong point. That is the activity and all-around usefulness of their strong men. Of course, against the comparatively light Lehigh line the Yale giants could do wonders, but taking this comparatively light Lenign line the giants could do wonders, but taking this into consideration, the Yale rushers were to-day and will subsequently be all agility, to judge from their movements whenever the ball was put in play.

Yale was not compelled to have recourse o her tricky plays, as the strength of her line made Lehigh gains impossible, and when she had the ball the inter-ference of the line and the fleetness of her backs gained all the ground necessary. Butterworth punted in good form. Line-

Rather a one-sided game of foot-ball was played at Eastern Park this afternoon between the Crescent Athletic Club team and the Boston Athletic Association's eleven. The Boston team simply smothered their opponents, piling up 16 points to 0 in the first half, and adding 6 more points in the second half.
